

Cara Dickson Perkins (now known as Akankha Perkins)
Remembered stories of Pris Dickson:

I hope someone includes the two stories I remember Ma telling me about Brad - stories he told on himself. One is about someone who was apparently a nuisance, calling Brad in the middle of the night. Mrs. Walker answered the phone, and after a whispered conversation with Brad, told the man, "I'm sorry he isn't here." The reply, "Well, if he's not there, who is that in your bed you were talking to?"

The other is about one of the many times Brad got stopped speeding to the Torrington Hospital. The cop pulled him over, and said, "Oh, it's only you, Doctor. Sorry I stopped you." I guess they usually knew his car and didn't stop him. Perhaps this was a different car.

Don't know why I remember these stories so well/long. I guess it's because of the lasting impression Brad made on us all.