Dear Ms. Greene,

While in Dr. Walker's waiting room in the 1960s, another was an older local farmer in bib overalls.

Walker ambled to the waiting room door, grumbled and beckoned to the farmer. They returned to Walker's office each with an arm around the shoulder of the other.

Farmer: "How you doin' Doc?"

Walker: "Gettin' tired! Tired of sick people."

The kind of tell-it-like-it-is candor one just doesn't hear from doctors anymore.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "Edward G. Bourne", with a long horizontal line extending to the right.
